The Ricoh 35 ZF is a fixed lens, zone focus compact from the mid 1960s. I'm not sure where mine came from: maybe my step dad, or Grandfather, or an aunt. It doesn't much matter where, really. I (mostly) enjoy it, and when I don't shoot it for a while, I start to miss it. When it first came to me, the light seals were bad, but I didn't know it. I shot a couple of photowalks with it, put ...

It's basically a small box with which you could take pictures using the automatic exposure features. However, this camera, as its sister, has the highly regarded Rikenon 40mm lens, had a full ...
